

Universidad Católica de Santa Fe

 Santa Fe, Argentina

Universidad Católica de Santa Fe - Facultad de Arquitectura y Diseño Industrial

Description

It was founded on June 9, 1957, by the then Archbishop of Santa Fe, Monsignor Dr. Nicolás Fasolino. During 2012 the Industrial Design career was incorporated into the Faculty of Architecture.

The Program in industrial Design is offered in the campus in Santa Fe and in Rosario. Students work most of the time in the workshops, where teachers and students interact continually on the theory and practice link. There, students are also in direct contact with materials and tools.

Strengths

- International students receive all kind of attention and help to find accommodation.
- The campus Santa Fe is located in the mideastern zone of Argentine, on one of the edges of the so-called "Pampas Plain" and in the coastal region of the country. This geographical area is characterized by rivers, lagoons, streams and wetlands, which surround the city.
