Description

The University of São Paulo (USP) is one of the three public universities in the state of São Paulo in Brazil. The USP, with around 75,000 students enrolled, is one of the largest universities in Latin America. The exchange program is within the School of Architecture and Urbanism (FAU).

The Design program at FAU is developed with an interdisciplinary focus, covering visual design, products, services and their systems, considering the characteristics of users and their sociocultural, political-economic and environmental context.

Strengths

- The Campus, located in a central area of São Paulo, is immersed in a green area.
- The program allows students to explore different areas of Design from Communication, Product and Service Design.
