 Mondragón, Spain

Mondragon Unibertsitatea - School of Engineering

Description

Mondragon University is a practical university immersed in entrepreneurial reality. A university that offers a training and learning experience that combines the educational and research needs of companies, organisations, and society.

Mondragon is a town in the north of Spain near the French border, in the Basque Country. It is an industrial city with a history of corporate activities. The industrial vision of the city is linked to the Mondragon Unibertsitatea - School of Engineering. The courses offered cover project management, technical drawing and CAD design, fluid engineering, thermal engineering and project methodologies.

Strengths

- Students have the possibility to attend some courses in English.
- It was founded on an innovative and distinct educational model that exports to the entire world and works through its own network.
